Boyken International Strengthens Project Management Staff

David Suarez brings healthcare facilities expertise to program management firm

Dallas, TX (October 13, 2008) ~ Boyken International, Inc., globally recognized for its program and project management services for healthcare, higher education, hospitality and government developments, has announced the addition of David Suarez to the firm's Dallas office as senior project manager.

Since 1987, Suarez has been serving in executive and senior project management roles for major healthcare and construction companies, reinforcing multi-million dollar healthcare construction projects with years of operations, planning, management and budgeting experience. Suarez will provide these services to a wide range of healthcare projects out of Boyken International's Dallas office.

"David has prepared strategic master plans from both the healthcare and construction standpoints," said Howard Templin, director of operations for Boyken International's Dallas office. "Having served in both these roles, David is well prepared to meet any healthcare construction challenges that our clients face."

Prior to joining Boyken International, Suarez held positions in the healthcare construction industry, managing new hospital construction, hospital renovations and additions and planning and construction for senior housing facilities with companies such as Trammell Crow, Lauth, HCA and Capital Senior Living. Suarez has served such health care systems as Baylor Healthcare System, HCA and Sisters of Saint Joseph of Orange, leading many multidisciplinary teams for projects both large and small to successful completion.
